If a school nurse is not available, who can administer this life-saving medication?

The Epilepsy Alliance (EAOC) has been working closely with the OC Department of Education and has come up with an answer.

Anyone who is properly trained.

For years, the Epilepsy Alliance has been providing seizure recognition training to OC school districts. We know school nurses have a myriad of duties and not many hours to do them in.

EAOC is ready to help.

We have now added Diastat® training to our curriculum.

- EAOC's one-hour training course is based on the Diastat® manufacturer's approved training and is sanctioned by neurologists, epileptologists, and attorneys serving on Epilepsy Alliance's Professional Advisory Board.
- EAOC trainers are specially trained by Valeant Pharmaceuticals and are led by an experienced adult trainer.
- EAOC's Diastat® hands-on training course is the only course offered by an epilepsy organization using life-size pediatric simulators, which increases participant confidence and skills.
- By scheduling EAOC's one-hour Diastat® training course, you can be assured of continuity of training throughout the district.
